

Hospitality and movement in the artistic traditions of India: past and present in its music, literature, and other cultural manifestations

Facultad de Filosofía y Letras, Universidad de Valladolid

25-26 November 2024

The challenges currently faced by Indian societies, which interpellate the rest of the world, demand constant critical revision. The construction of nationalisms from the past and the present, imagined, assumed or contested racial identities, the role of ethnic, religious or gendered minorities in the construction of identity, and the reach of the voices of minorities as well as their representation within the broader civil society are matters that demand our attention. They are all intermeshed with the concept of hospitality understood as hosting the Other.

Disciplines such as art, literature, and spectacle are not alien to these matters. It is pertinent to explore and discuss the ideological principles conveyed in the world of cinema, music, literature, and painting, as well as in other expressions of culture of contemporary Indian society. These relate to very diverse matters such as the legislation of author rights, the makings of heritage, the dynamics of artistic performance or the social impact of video games, among others. They are examples that apparently are not related to one another, but in reality they are all affected and affect the cultural dynamics of our time.

We welcome presentations, round tables, and posters* both in English and Spanish that tackle any of the subject matters of this seminar. These can be but are not limited to:

- 1.- The use of art in the (re)creation of Indian nationalisms.
- 2.- Agency and representation of ethnic, gendered, class or religious minorities in Indian art (literature, music, painting, cinema...).
- 3.- Identity, race, and power in the subcontinent's artistic manifestations.
- 4.- Hosting the Other in the society and culture of India.
- 5.- Cultural industries, mass-media, and artistic creation in/about/from India.
- 6.- Digitalisation, dissemination, archiving, and heritage-making processes of Indian cultures around the world.
- 7.- The current transmission of Indian cultural and traditional knowledge.
